ORIGINAL POETRY.

THE BURNING SHIP. The gallant ship rode o'er the waters light, Her flag to the breeze was streaming, And the starry heavens were clear and bright,-All was hush'd, and the silver queen of night, In the high blue arch was beaming.

Twas beauteous, so fair and sweet the night, The vessel so swift was flying; The hearts of the crew were calm and light, And the heavens and sea were so blue and bright, They thought not ere morn of dying.

Above were the heavens blue and clear, The moon, and each bright attendant, Sail'd slowly in her own brightness there. With her star-beaming zone celestial fair, And in lustre so resplendant.

Reneath the foaming sea did roll, Each heavenly orb reflecting : Twas a scene that lifted the willing soul, Afforing to HIM who our thoughts control, Each vision of woe rejecting.

But lo ! what light dances o'er the sea, What shricks break this stilly hour! Now it stronger becomes-now brighter-oh, me! O'er the wave pale destruction's sprite doth flee,

With wide and with horrid power. Hark! 'tis the crew-hear their heart-rending

Who, unmoved, can behold their emotion; Behold now the flames bright and awful they rise, Now brilliant and clear as it were to the skies. From the depths of the wide rolling ocean.

And see, there is one, 'tis a Father doth leap With his Son in the bright illum'd sea; And he cries "dearest boy, cling to me-do not

And now to thy mercy committed-oh, deep To be saved or to perish by thee " Oh! mark, for himself, he regardless appears-Will he perish, a being so brave; In thy power, Great Heaven, he trusts-all his

Are alone for his son, in one arm whom he bears, With the other he buffets the wave.

He weakens-his strength is exhausted-his son Still he grasps with convulsive emotion; One effort in vain-life will never be won, Thy earthly career, noble being, bas run, And thou now doth repose in the ocean.

Behold that fair girl-she to Heaven doth raise Her hands, as insptoring for aid; Alas! 'tis in vain-now on thee death lays His heart-chilling grasp, and the ravaging blaze, Envelops the beauteous maid.

Oh, God !-hear her sercams, how they strike to the soul .--

Can naught, youth and innocence save? Now they fainter become, by death's dreadful con-And see, 'tis the girl's blackened corse that doth

In its wide and its watery grave.

Lo! 'tis her mother now leaps in the wave a! Tis her shrick so heart-rending and wild; Hark, "my daughter," she cries, "whom no power could save. Oh! wait, and I'll come to thy blue ocean grave, And she sinks in the deep to her child.

Now fainter the blaze doth become, now it dies-The black hull now rolls o'er the billow. While volumes of smoke from the ocean arise, As though with the souls of the crew to the skies, While they sleep on their ocean-weed pillow.

KISSES.

There is a mutual kiss, that flies From lip to lip, unstain'd and free: When beating heart to heart replies, In tones of truest eestacy.

Tis there love reigns in greatest power, And revels all the bright day long, In smiles-nor dreams an angry hour. Will come to blast his haleyon song.

There is a kiss in sadness taken. That thrills with bliss mix'd up in woe, And fondly whispers, "oh, forsaken! Love and life and all must go."

Hast seen two hearts long parted meet. With Heaven's own fire in each fond eye; In hearts as warm or lips as sweet, This kies supplents the struggling sigh.

There is a fervid kiss that tells A touching tale-an earnest pray'r: And hope and ad that in it dwells-Life, love, and joy, and all is there. J. S.

CANZONET. O, weep not thus, we both shall know Ere long a happier doom; There is a place of rest below. Where thou and I shall surely go.

And sweetly sleep, releas'd from woe, Within the tomb. My cradle was the bouch of ease, And sorrow rocked me in it: Pate seemed her saddest robe to wear, On the first day that saw me there, And darkly shadowed with despair, Life's earliest minute. E'en then the griefs I now possess, As natal boons were given; And the fair form of happiness, Which hover'd round, intent to bless, Scar'd by the phantoms of distress, Flew back to heaven!

For I was made in joy's despite, And meant for misery's slave; And all my hours of brief delight, Pled like the speedy winds of night, Which soon shall wheel their sutten flight Across my grave !

SONNET. To S-, a dejected friend, at a distance. Our locust-bow'r throws off the gloom It wore thro' winter's reign. And pleased with May, of youthful bloom,

In green, looks gay again. The rill so long in silence bound, As icy winter's slave; Its banks of green, with murm'ring sound,

In freedom now can lave. The blackbird now resumes his lay That had been hush'd so long; And ev'ry songster welcomes May, With its light-hearted song.

Thou canst not now be sad !- sure Hope must spring,

Thy spirits flow-when Nature's beauty bids thee LINDEN. May 1, 1825.

THE MORALIST.

Piety communicates a divine lustre to the female mind: wit and beauty, like the flowers of the field, may flourish and charm for a season; but let it be remembered, that, like the fragrant blossoms that bloom in the air, these gifts are frail and fading; age will nip the bloom of beauty; sickness and sorrow will. stop the current of wit and humor; but, in that gloomy time which is appointed for all; piety will support the drooping soul, like a refreshing dew upon the parched earth.

FOR THE SATURDAY EVENING POST.

"Like blossom'd trees o'erturn'd by vernal storms, Lovely in death the beauteous ruin lay

Though years have passed, and a variety of objects claimed my attention-other scenes and new friends, engaged my affections-and deeper, darker sorrows thrown their desolating shadows over my path-I cannot forget the feelings excited in my bosom on beholding the remains of a beautiful child, "Lovely, indeed, she was, both to soul and to eye"and I cannot say which charmed most, the attractions of her form, or the sweetness of her disposition, and unusual quickness of perception, and maturity of mind, evinced in almost every word and action. She irresistably won my affections-nor come attached, until the voice that told she was no more, came over me like an electric shock, and paralysed, at the same moment, it awakened every sense of feeling-it required | glish queen, Caroline. some exertion of fortitude to overcome my emotions-her friends were mine also-and very dear to me; the contemplation of their sorrow, no doubt augmented my own-for the heart cannot but sympathize with the afflicted, even though they be strangers. She was trumourn over the ruin of such ?- I could scarcely summon resolution to behold her for the last time! with hesitating footsteps, I approached the narrow habitation, which contained the relics of the loved and lovelybeautiful even in death, thought I-a sweet smile still lingered on the countenance of the sleeping infant; and I could yet perceive a slight tinge of the rose, suffusing the pure lily of death-the azure veins had not become entirely invisible, and the dark ringlet resting on her neck and fair forehead, resembled the shadow of a cloud reposing on the snow drifts in a moonlight evening. I wished to indulge freely in all the "luxury of grief;" but the presence of those who could not forsake the beloved of their souls, nor give up in sincere resignation, to the trying dispensation, fortears, for the suppression of my feelings, rendered them more agonizing-could I have gained worlds at that moment by the utterance of a single word, I could not have spoken-but thought was free-it ascended to the place of her eternal rest-surveyed her among the innumerable company of Angels that "circle the throne of God rejoicing"-the happiest of the happy-for nothing of sin or sorrow had ever wounded her spirit-it was pure as heaven itself, and therefore could mourn over the tabernacle about to be blended with native earth ?-why disturb thy repose, dear angel-thou art happily relieved from the bondage of a sinful world, where cares and trouble crowd thickly around the path of coming years-disappointed hopes, faithless friendships and desolated affections, too soon alas! make a dreary wilderness of time-how gladly would I take my rest beside thee, were I as certain of thy blissful entrance into the world of spirits -- but "all the days of my appointed time let me wait with due resignation to the Lord's will."

Many shrink from beholding a fellow mortal prepared for the "place of the dead;" and shun with superstitious awe, "the abode of the tomb"-but to me they are full of serious and salutary reflections-such seasons chasten and purify the soul-wean the unhallowed affections from the things of timeplace before us those of eternity-and teach us to set our house in order, for we must tices as we have lately seen. surely die.

Go, stand by the grave, look down into its dark chamber, see how small a space we occupy in that earth, of which, when living, we desire to possess so much !- where now is pride? where is ambition? what can the miser take with him, of all that vast heap he has been denying himself every comfort to accumulate? or can the prodigal spendit? where may have a stone placed over him to tell that of a plate, cup, or saucer, which he would he existed-another mingles with dust, and break to pieces in the chains, and throw overhis name is forgotten! Though painful to humanity to witness the decay of what was fair, beautiful, and dear to us, I have often monkey might do? but another of his exploits

ORIGIN OF NAMES, PHRASES, AND CUSTOMS.

Barber's Pole. -It was an old superstition that Rome was once delivered from the plague by the god Esculapius, who, it was supposed, came there in the form of a serpent, and hid himself among the reeds in an island of the Tiber. Ever after that, Esculapius was represented with a staff, round which a serpent was wreathed, and his other hand rested on the head of a serpent. They were particularly sacred to him, not only as ancient physicians used them in their prescriptions, but because they were considered as emblems of that prudence and foresight, which are so necessary in the profession of medicine. In former times, surgeons were likewise barbers; and when a man displayed a staff with a twisted snake at his door, it was a token that he cured diseases, as well as shaved beards. Barbers are no longer physicians, but the old sign of Esculapius is still continued.

Days of the week .- The Sun, Moon, Tuisco, Woden, Thor, Friga, and Seater were Saxon gods,-to each of whom one day in the week was consecrated. Sun's day, Moon's day, Tuisco's day, Woden's day, Thor's day, Friga's days and Seater's day. Hence the names of Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and Saturday.

Massachusetts.- The land in this state was mostly purchased of Massasoit, the chief of the Mount Haup Indians; and the name was probably taken from his, and gradually changed to Massachusetts. Vermont .- From two French words signi-first tried to speak the word English they called Yengees. The white inhabitants of the northern states were soon known to the neighboring tribes by this appellation: and to this day we are distinguished from our southern and western brethren by the title of Liberty Cap .- The Romans devoted a temple to the Goddess of Liberty, in the court of which the Prætor emancipated all slaves who, by money, important services, &c. had obtained the right of freedom; and as none but free men were allowed to cover their heads in Rome, an important part of the ceremony consisted in giving a cap, such as was then worn, instead of our modern hats. The person who had been released from slavery used to parade about the forum for several days afterwards, displaying his head gear with all the pride of bade it; then my heart wanted the relief of freedom. Hence, Liberty and the Cap became associated. Therefore when medals were struck off in honour of Brutus, and to commemorate the death of Casar, Liberty was represented with the Freeman's cap on one side, and two daggers on the other .-Various medals were afterwards made, on which Liberty was sometimes shown with the

This emblem has since been adopted by almost all nations who supposed they were fighting against tyranny. With the Spaniards, at a very early period, with the Swiss, and with the Americans, it has successively been partake of its purest joys :- oh, why do we a popular badge of freedom. The French, during their Revolution, wished to establish the Liberty Cap as a national emblem, but fearful of imitating the United States too closely they gave their cap a different form. Unluckily they chose the Phrygian cap, which belonged to a people who never knew freedom.

TWO SAILOR MONKEYS.

Natural History generally, is interesting, but anecdotes, illustrative of the disposition and habits of the Simia species of animals, are peculiarly so, as their ludicrous and mischievous tricks apparently approach the reasoning qualities of human beings. Whether it be that the natural disposition of the beasts. like our own, develops itself more freely on shipboard, from the absence of those occupations and amusements which give it an artificial colouring ashore, or whether it be simply that the peculiarities of the animal are only more discernable from his being brought into a closer contact with man, we pretend not to say, but the following stories of the diverting pranks of two Sailor Monkeys affords as clear a trait of their nature and prac-

"The first of these sailed on board a frigate, and though always in scrapes, was the favorite both of cabin and ward-room, and indeed of every mess except the midshipmen's. being, perhaps, disliked by these young gen-tlemen, for the same reasons that poor cousins (as a French author observes) are ill seen by us, to wit, for approaching them too nearly in nature. "This animal was distinguished, like the rest of his tribe, by a propensity to gratuitous mischief, and one of his principal amuse-

This monkey was well aware of there be ng a large store of apples in a locker, in the ward-room; but his thievish tricks were so well known, that he was excluded from all legitimate access to it. Under these circumstances, he provided himself with a piece of wadding, and with this implement in one galley with the other, he broke a pane in the ward-room window with his wadding, and having carefully picked out all the broken glass, introduced himself into the forbidden territory. Here like the animal in the fable, he gorged himself so fully that he was unable to retreat. Being taken in the fact he received the discipline of the rope's end, but derived little benefit from his chastisement.

All these pranks, however provoking at the moment, seemed only to make him a greater favourite with the crew. The captain himself, who studied pug's happiness as much as the others, and who perhaps thought he might be somewhat steadied by matrimony, was anxione to provide him with a wife. It was at this period that a trifling mistake in wording an order, inundated all England with monkeys. E- W-, distinguished by his passion for a conservatory, meant to write to his correspondent in the Brazils, to collect and send him two hundred varieties of the monkey-plant : but unfortunately omitted the word plant. In consequence of this order, arrived a letter from his correspondent, nforming him that he had sent him one hundred and seventy-three varieties of the monkey, which were all that were known in Rio de Janeiro and its neighborhood, but he had no doubt that the order could be completed by his agents in the interior.

Before the unhappy botanist could provide ominous paper, 'half printed and half written,' which was the bill of lading in the usual form- Shipt by the grace of God, sound and in good condition, on board the good ship Friendly Endeavour, 173 monkeys, &c. &c. &c. and so God send the good ship Friendly Endeavour, with her cargo to a safe port.'-E--- W---, having a little recovered from his consternation, proceeded to read the letter from which this fearful annunciation had drop't. This was from the captain of the good ship Friendly Endeavour, informing him that he was arrived in the river with 169 out of 173 monkeys consigned to him, four having died upon the passage; and begging him to have them landed as soon as possible, for they began to be very mischeevous.'

They were landed as soon as possible, were disposed of with equal speed, and, in consequence, an unprecedented fall took place in the monkey-market. Exports were now made to the remotest parts of England, and, among these, was a female, despatched to Portsmouth, who was bought a bargain by the possessor of the maratime monkey, and given by him in marriage to his favorite.

For some time the happiness of the wedded pair appeared to be complete; and the frigate tailed upon a summer cruise during their honey-moon. The husband, however, soon grew indifferent; and indifference was soon succeeded by disgust. This was manifested by angry looks, chatter, and even blows, upon the female persevering in her ook place in the husband's conduct, and was hailed with correspondent joy by the ship's company. Their pleasure was, however, of short duration, for the traitor, having one fine day decoyed his wife out to the end of the fore-top gallant yard, as if to show her something at sea, and sat down with her on the spar, slipt his paw under her sitting part and tumbled her overboard.

I never shall forget the momentary horror with which this was witnessed by all, with the exception of a French captain then a prisoner on board, who turning to the second eutenant, exclaimed, 'Parbleu, Monsieur, ce drolela a beaucoup de caractere."

But we must get back to the second Saior Monkey, "who, (says the writer of these necdotes,) went to sea, accompanied by a bear, with a relation of mine, who was captain of a small sloop of war, and who profess ed to take them with a view of keeping his men in good humour. I believe it was to minister to his own amusement. Probably both objects were attained.

The monkey principally extracted his fun rom the bear. This beast, who was of a saturnine complexion indulged himself much in deeping on the sunny side of the deck. On hese occasions the monkey would overhaul his paws and twitch out any hair which could be found matted by tar or pitch, the sufferng of which to remain seemed to be a great candal in his opinion. At other times he would open Bruin's evelids and peep into his eyes, as if to ascertain what he was dreaming about. The bear irritated at such liberties being taken upon his person, used to make clumsy attempts to revenge himself, but his persecutor was off in an instant. The rigging was, on these occasions, his place of refuge. Thither he was indeed followed by his enemy; but poor Bruin was but an indifferent top man and seldom got beyond lubber's hole. The monkey, on the contrary, was famous for his activity, and for some time was entitled by the sailors, 'Deputy-captain of the fore-top.' He obtained the designation from a very singular practice. Having observed the excitement produced on deck by the announcement of a sail a head, which, as well as the chase which followed, seemed highly agreeable to him, the fore-top became his avorite station; from whence he made his signals with great energy, chattering with a peculiar scream when any vessel was in sight, and indicating by signs in what direction it appeared. Pug continued to volunteer his services for ome time in this manner, and constantly found his reward. But, at length, upon the sloop's getting on bad cruising ground, he found his employment dull, and, by way of enlivening it, amused himself by giving false

He was started from this by the boatswain's nate, and lost his rank as Deputy captain of the fore-top. In lieu of which, moreover, he was new-named Monk the Marine; a denomination which he certainly knew to be opprobrious, as he resented it with grimmaces, chatter, and whenever he dared, with blows.

Though he was fond of the excitement of chase, he was not supposed to have good nerves, and those who had him in action (he was, after the first experiment always sent below) made but an ill report of his steadi-

This poor monkey came to a melancholy end. He had observed a sick lieutenant, who felt "it is good for us to be here;" and salu- can hardly, I think, be paralleled in monkish | breakfasted after the rest of his mess, making | and Harriet sometimes, when the weather was his tea, and being accidentally left alone in the gun room, determined to imitate him .-He, however, succeeded ill in his mixture ; for he infused a paper of tobacco which was lying on the table, into the pot, instead of tea, and afterwards swallowed it with its accompaniments of milk and sugar. The illmanaged beverage produced the most fearlong and loathsome vomitings; of which he finally died.

The doctor, who was a materialist and an atheist, and a most quarrelsome fellow, (he had killed two brother officers in duels, one for only calling him Dr. Gallipot,) attended him with more care than we had expected : but the poor beast (as the purser said) was outward-bound, and could not be recalled.

The surgeon pronounced that Pug died of the iliac passion, and announced this as a reason for believing that man was but a better and wiping at the same time, a tear from her breed of monkey."

FILIAL AFFECTION.

Exemplified in the life of Henry Moreland.

[CONCLUBED.] Among the windings of a woody vale, By solitude and deep surrounding shades, But more by bashful modesty conceal'd, Together, thu they shunn'd the cruel scorn, Together, thu they shunn'd the crue, seein, Which v rtue, sunk to poverty, would meet From giddy passion, and low minded pride.

Thompson. Henry Moreland, in vain strove to gain further intelligence of his mother, or to learn whether she yet lived-and this created suspense, which every day became more painful. and rendered him weary of life-with these for the disposal of this wilderness of monkeys, feelings, he could find no pleasure in the buscame another letter, out of which dropt an the and gaiety of the city, from the glitter of which he daily stole away; sometimes to the retirement of his chamber, but more frequently to the beautiful green wood, which bordered a retired part of the bay near the city. He would often rise long before the matin lark had began her early song, and saunter here the livelong day; sometimes visiting the little dwellings, which now and then would catch his eye, half hid among the thick foliage, and showing their neat white-washed fronts indistinctly amid clusters of honey suckles, and mingling roses and evergreens; yet though these scenes were even to his eye so beautiful, they soon failed to chase the gloom from his mind which was a prey to a bitter melancholy, which darkened every picture, and poisoned every thought. In such mood, he one day drew near to a cottage more humble than the rest, but having the appearance of much neatness, and the arrangement of the flowers and shrubbery-the sweet jessamine trained over the lattice work, forming a delightful arbour around the door, and the whole arrangement of the exterior spoke a superior taste in its possessor-it was very retired; he had never seen it before, and now felt a pressing inclination to enter within; as he approached, his attention was suddenly arrested by a scene which he caught a glimpse of through the half opened window-he beheld two persons apparently in considerable agitation, and as he drew still nearer, could distinguish one to be an aged female, who had apparently fainted, and was supported on the bosom of the other, who was bathing her brow with some cooling restorative—her back was towards him, but from her appearance, he presumed she was young, and probably the daughter of the aged invalid. sight of distress in any form, was sufficient to enlist his feelings, and he immediately determined on entering the cottage, to render his aid, and if possible, relieve the distress which had so sensibly affected him-he had already passed the little pailing which enclosed the green yard, and his foot touched the threshold of the door, when the sound of a voice from within, reached his ear, and he suddenly stopped-he was unperceived, although within a few paces of the speaker, and distinctly heard a conversation, to which he listened with fixed attention. " Mother, dear Mother, do you feel relieved?" "Yes, Harriet, (replied the parent,) I feel much better, your kind care has once more restored me to life. Oh, Harriet, what do I not owe thee-how can I ever repay thee all?" " Nay, nay," replied Harriet, in a voice harmonious as the notes of a silver-toned flute, as she pressed back the hair from her mother's forehead, and kissed it with the fervour of affection, "indeed you owe me nothing-I have no joy but in serving you-then why do you speak thus, when you know it gives me pain?" Well well, my child, Heaven, I hope, has some blessings in store for thee-oh, might they be showered down now upon thy young spirit-and if a mother's prayers, poor, helpless and afflicted as thine, e'er reach the throne of mercy, mine for thee, my fond child, may not go unregarded -- but you must not go out to day, Harriet, the exercise may prove too much for you; you are not well, you have of late too much exerted yourself, and although on those exertions depend our only support, yet fear not, we shall not be permitted to suffer, for the hand of heaven, my child, is with us, and around us, and will open a way - God will protect us, and I feel of late an increased confidence to repose our all on him." "Well, I will remain at home to day if it please you-Margary will soon be here; in the mean time let us indulge in those remembrances, which, though so sad, are ever so dear to me, and I the distance of about 34 feet, they struck a know they are not less so to you, though we large vein of beautiful water, exceedingly like which and a little brackish to the taste, which as ever, and the near approach of the 10th day of this month, adds a deeper interest to the thoughts we cherish, for on that day, you know he left us. Ah me! unhappy day, of what misery has it not been productive-It is six years since, and I was then but twelve years of age, yet I remember it as freshly as ever. But I see you are affected-I am perhaps wrong in thus continually musing on days which were the happiest of my life-but one cannot help it, the dear visions will come uncalled, yet never unwelcome-Oh! why, why did you ever give that unhappy consent for is no less than 260 gallons of water discharged his departure " and here she wept as if her in one minute of time! for some distance lovely creature—Thompson's beautiful de- an imperceptible gas or vapour so very inscription of his Lavinia, might justly be applied to Harriet, for in truth long supported herself, and the few inmates which composed their little circle. She was, indeed, an excellent creature-of so mild a disposition-so feeling a heart-so dutiful and affectionate- and with such sweet modesty inherent in her very nature, shedding a softened hand, and swinging himself from the stern ful commotion in his inside, attended with and sacred lustre over all, that the being who could behold her once, and not feel a thrill of apture, deep, chaste and exquisite, steal thro' his frame, must have possessed but a cold heart devoid of all blissful sensations-for in her look, was the rich, irresistible touchstone of feeling and sensibility. Henry remained fixed to the spot-through an opening which the breeze made among the leaves of the jessamine, which encircled the window he had caught, for a moment, a slight view of her countenance, as she stood fanning her mother, own eye-it was brief-the bright morning star, breaking through the clouds of night, kindle an exstatic glow-a bewildering sensation of delight and astonishment thrilled through his veins, and for a while he forget that he had ever known sorrow; and that which tended, if possible, to heighten the interest of those looks to him, was the striking resemblance he fancied he could trace to some he had once known, and almost loved, though then she was but a child. He gave himself up to a train of happy recollections-he thought of the times when he lived beneath a parent's roof, and was young and happywhen the gay breath of spring buoyed up his light spirits to the skies, and yet though so balmy and blissful, seemed but the light zephyr of that breeze which was to waft him to the future joys of manhood, and riper age-he was lost in the sadly pleasing reverie -his feelings were absorbed in a delicious dream of the past-a band of his youthful associates passed before him, and smiles sparkled among their tears, as they waved their farewell hands-then came the form which opened the deep fount of anguish-its streams gushed up and overflooded his soul, and his eyes for a moment were dimmed with the abundance. He again looked-the vision is still there, and smiles upon him with unutterable tenderness-and behold! she rests upon the form of a youthful girl, blooming as the rose-lovely as the first dream of innocence -'tis she, in whom he recognizes the looks he had once loved as a child, but which until now had almost been banished, even from his memory-she is enamoured of some bright vision-some new delight-and as her snow arm encircles his mother's waist, her young spirit flows toward him in a sweet glow of long remembered fondness, claiming in speechless exstacy, the reward of a faithful, unchangeable devotedness-in his love, seeking a refuge, and mingling inseparably with his spirit in tender delightful unison. He gazes intensely, and is lost in the glowing trancebut as he gazes, the clouds of memory arisethe lightnings flash in the blue vault of heaven tempest of misery howis, and the showers of grief descend in drowning torrents -the shadows of death envelope the forms he would fain cling to forever-a ghastly paleness is on them-the tomb opens-they de seend, and in vain his aching eye-balls are strained-he can behold them no longer, The cannot live under such undue excitement, and overcome with the intense workings of an enthusiastic imagination, he utters a faint grean, and falls prostrate before the door of the cottage-but lo! he is borne within by forms fairer than those of the Houris, and his feverish temples are bathed with the refreshing tears of pitying tenderness, dropping in pearly rills from the blue orbs of melting purity, and pressed by the soft snowy hands of compassion-he is watched by ministering spirits, who seem descended from the skies, to call back the fleeting breath, and bid it stay to receive its full sum of earthly bliss. They get ready the refreshing wine, and bring out the sweet balsam, and the elixar-they wash the palms of his hands, and smooth back the silken locks from his face-he revives-the paleness which gave to his looks so unusual an aspect, no longer obscures them-while the mother, and this, her adopted daughter, gaze, and shuddering, seem to recognize the form before them. They are at first struck with the strange resemblance-they speak to him in the soothing accents of love, and lay their trembling hands upon his forehead-his eves open-a delirious shriek bursts from their quivering lips, and in wild delight echoes round; for God hath brought together those who for six long years, had endured the panes of a painful, heart-breaking absence, and gives renewed strength to age, health to the child f sorrow and sickness, and permits a blessed union between two fond hearts, that know from the sad teachings of experience, how to value and enjoy the gifts of an all bounteous

Geological Curiosity in Herrison County, Va. Within 200 yards from the road leading from Clarksburg up the Elk Creek to Booth's Ferry, and within five and a half miles from the place on the premises of David Hall, a company has been for some time engaged at intervals, in boring for salt; they commenced in the bed of the creek upon a solid rock; at through a rich vein or bed of copper about 4 feet in thickness; and at the depth of about 180 feet, they opened a strong vein of wind which instantly found vent at the top of the well in a tremendous roaring and spouting of water throwing up perpendicular columns of that element to the distance of 30 feet!! Although the diameter of the well is not more than 2 and a half inches, it is supposed there young heart would have broke-she was a round this perpendicular shoot of water, plays that element comes in contact with it. GENERAL WASHINGTON.

The following anecdote was furnished by an old and very respectable citizen now no more-one who was intimately acquainted with the General and the fact.

Many years ago, and sometime before the revolution, Colonel Washington and his lady resort of company, among whom there always were poor, sick, and lame people, who came to seek the benefit of the waters with very head. in Virginia, at which place there was a great slender means. An acquaintance with the situation of the people, was the constant but secret care of Colonel Washington. It was observed by the relator of this anecdote, that they drew fresh bread every day, without money. Curiosity led him to inquire of the baker how he expected to get paid; he hesitated, and said he was enjoined not to tell; that the very people who eat the bread, did not know who paid for it. This but increased his curiosity: when, with strong injunctions of secresy, he whispered in his ear, he received his pay from Colonel Washington; that i had always been his practice when at Bath, and that the bill was a pretty considerable one! This is that same Washington, who under God achieved our independence, and, consequently our present national happiness and glory, but is himself denied a monument, which, I suppose, would not cost above two hundred thousand dollars. But the faithful historian will raise a monument to his name, and among the ample materials perhaps this fragment may find a place.

TRIENDSHIP.

A false friend is like the shadow in a dial, it appears in clear weather, but vanishes on the approach of a cloud. Is there a friend indeed? then wilt thou know her when thy acquaintance forsake thee. Will she defend thy innoceace when all men accuse thee falsely? will she bear reproach unjustly for thy sake? take her to thy bosom :- she is a jewel of high price-a diamond of inestimable value.

AMERICAN LADIES.

Perhaps there is no country in the world. where the women are more completely domestic, than they are in our own; and none where female influence is more generally felt. This is a most happy circumstance. And it affords a powerful argument in favour of female education. It is trite, I know, but very important to remark, that when ladies are distinguished for domestic habits and virtues their mutual influence is very great. They mould the hearts, and to a great degree form the understandings of the future fathers and mothers in our country .- Now they, who have in their hands so great a part of early edaccation, certainly ought to receive that cultivation of heart and mind, which would fit them for the discharge of the very important duties of their station. This is no easy work. It demands skill and judgment, as well as attention. Surely preparation ought to be made for it, that it may be done well. Look at the majority of girls of eighteen, in the country, and see what are their qualifications for the place at the head of a household .-But female influence is felt not only in do mestic life ;-it reaches to every part of society. Every where it ought to be intellectual as well as sensitive; intelligent as well as affable; good as well as pretty. No where, indeed, are they more modest, more pure and delicate, than among ourselves; but if to these graces of the female character were added suitable mental improvement, the effect py. A higher spirit of literature would perrade our state; and young men would spend that time in study, which now they waste in would be awakened, and we might hope to witness the purity, without the extravagancies of chivalry.

THE RICH AND THE POOR. The rich have the most meat; the poor have the best appetite. The rich lie softest -the poor sleep the soundest. The rich have delicacies, the poor have health. The rich are afraid of losing; the poor have nothing to lose, and so in this respect have nothing to fear. The rich dread the midnight robber; the poor have no apprehensions of being robbed. The rich hang them-selves through fear of Poverty; the poor (such as have always been poor) laugh and sing, and love their lives too well to put their necks in the nocse.

Extravagance is reckoned dishonesty .-Whosoever spends upon himself, or throws away upon any other person, more than he can prudently afford, (whatever fine names of elegance, good nature, or generosity his conduct may receiv.) in reality disposes of what cannot be fairly called his own-he does in effect-defraud his family, and will be in great danger of being driven at last to endeavour to repair by unlawful means, what he has lost

My neart is glad when I look upon you.-Our heads have become white. They are blossomed with age. It is the course of nature. We ought to thank the Great Spirit who has taken care of our lives. When first we met we were walking in the red path. We waded in blood until the murderers of our women and children had ceased. In the land of our enemies we kindled our war fires. We sat by them until morning, when battle came with the yell of our enemies. We met them, they either fled or fell. War is no more heard in our land. The mountains speak peace. Joy is in our valleys. The warrior is careless, and amokes the pipe of peace. His arms lav idle ; he points to them, and speaks to his children of his valiant deeds; his glory will not depart with him, but remain with his sons.

We have met near the house of our Great Father, the President. Friendship formed in danger will not be forgotton, nor will the hungry man forget him who fed him. The meeting of friends gladdens the heart. Our countenances are bright as we look on each other. We rejoice that our Father has been kind to us. The men of his house are friendly, Our hearts have been with you always, and we are happy again to take the Great Chief

> Among the many expedients for smuggling goods into France, the following scheme to elude the strict vigilance of the Custom-house Officers at Dieppe has some dexterity: Several persons had procured large stone bottles, and by knocking out the bottoms, they were enabled to fill the vessels with silk stockings and thread lace. A false bottom was then left open. In this manner, the bottles were frequently carried ashore, and if any inquiry was made by the searching officers the answer was, that they were only going to the spirit merchant to be filled with liquor. This practice was successfully pursued, until a short time past, when a young man from Brighton, ventured on too heavy a speculation. He filled his bottle with ten dozen of stockings, and as he was proceeding ashore, the weight of the goods forced out the bottom, when the disclosure of the secret treasure astounded the officers, who were more chagrined at the discovery from their being duped by the cunning artifices of John Bull.

It is well known, that there is a very powerful party in Georgia, who are determined to drive the Creeks from what they are pleased to call the Georgian territory, and dispossess them of a very rich inheritance. At the head of this party is Governor Troup; and its violence has been long manifest. There is also a formidable party in the State opposed to their measures, as a violation of the rights of men, the obligation of solemn treaties, and the great principles of Christianity.

SATURDAY. JUNE 18, 1825.

TO READERS AND CORRESPONDENTS.

"Ida"-" Rosa" - Polycarp, and the "Dary Milk Maid," are selected from the receipts of the present week.

Two articles from a correspondent at Pitts. ourg are received, and so far as we can judge from the portions we have been able to decy pher, they possess some merit; but we have not the patience this warm weather to go through the whole, nor can we conveniently spare the time from other avocations, to spend two or three hours over a scribbled collection of hieroglyphics. If he chooses to send something like a fair copy, we shall be pleased to attend to him

Several articles intended for this week's sheet, have been necessarily delayed. The "Conundrums" are laid by for our next Olio.

The long list of unmentionables in the hape of doggred rhymes, love sick ditties sonnets, &c. &c. which have been accumulat. ing for some weeks past, will be enumerated hundred miles, the whole length of the road, and marched in proper array through our connecting," says the editor, " the Capitals columns; be reviewed and quietly dismissed, probably in the course of a week or twomotto, the "Review or Wags of Windsor."

It is unnecessary to inform our readers in this part of the country, of its having been somewhat warm for a week or two past, as they are, no doubt, sufficiently satisfied of the fact by this time. The thermometer has been as high as 97 or 98, exposed, if not more: a state of the atmosphere, when it is quite pleasant, among our brick walls and sultry streets. to think of the shady groves, babbling brooks. cold springs, grottos and caverns, with which poets and prosers, and travelling editors in letters to themselves, occasionally amuse their readers. A man, no doubt, feels himself considerably refreshed, after a warm day's work Juan de Ulloa still holds out, and can do so as of puffing and blowing, to find himself reclining on a cool s booth sofa, or setting with his coat off, in a fine draft of fresh air, (where he stands some chance of getting cold, and a touch of the chilis and ague in the bargain, and hear an agreeable description of the Eric Canal, the falls of Niagara, the green mountains of Vermont, or the Rocky mountains of the west, enjoying all the benefits and pleasure of a rural excursion over hill and dale, without its toil; and then when he goes to ting with the heat, it is so cool and comfortable to bring to mind what he has heard, and dream of the lakes and shades and waterfalls. seventy mules taken. The only way to check and sparkling icicles with which his head has such insolence is to go in sufficient numbers been filled. After such a night, who would not feel grateful to the travelling literati, for their cordial draughts of mental refreshment, partaken of so seasonably, and productive of such beneficial effects upon the overheated and languid system. Among those to whom we feel thus indebted, we particularly remember our pleasant friend, of the Advocate, who, in his " peep at the west," and occasional notices of his favourite retreat at the "Pine woods," has, as usual, acquitted himself so cleverly that if it were not out of fashion, we should almost be tempted to drink his health, political, moral, mental, and bodily, in a full flowing glass of our cool city ale, (think of that,) or in a generous bumper of ice punch.

> "One movement of the Congress unresisted by you, and all is lost.—Temporize no longer-make known your resolution, that this subject shall not be touched by them, but at their peril." "Lentreat you therefore. most earnestly, now, that it is not too late to step forth, and having exhausted the argument, TO STAND by YOUR ARMS!!"

It will scarcely be credited that these are the words of a citizen of this country; a mem. ber of this bond of union, of whose virtue and intelligence we are prone to boast-yet it is the fact-the individual lives, who dares insult the patriotism and good sense of the American people, by the use of such foul and untimely language-language engendering Colombian cruiser on his way from Havana to feelings productive of consequences which a good man shudders at beholding even in im-A letter from King on of May 11, announgination. > Lafayette, it will be seen, arrived at Boston on the 16th inst. after travelling at a rate which approaches, in its rapidity, to the idea we form of Military "forced marches." The immense distance he has travelled, and the numerous addresses he has listened to, and himself delivered, in so short a period, will appear almost incredible to foreign ears; and may seem in aftertimes, even among ourselves, as the work of romance and fiction, and the whole history of his glorious career, as an effusion from the fertile imagination of a second Homer: for distance will doubtless show these extraordinary events, in a still more brilliant and impressive form than at present, great and beautiful as they now appear.

at Washington, in which he successfully vindicates the proceedings at Foxardo. The same principles on which the invasion on an enemy's territory, as in the case of General Jackson, on his entrance into Florida, in the prosecution of the Seminole war, was justified, a e considered as strictly applicable in the present instance. Commodore Porter sailed from the United States, for the purpose of protecting the American Commerce, and if practicable, to break up the nest of buccaniers. who had for so long a period plundered the property, and outraged the citizens, both of this and of other countries. As related to them, there could be no neutrals : having violated the law of nations, and become them. selves outlaws, they could claim no protection from any power, and being as they were the avowed enemies of all-all had equally a right o commence hostilities, without the formal preliminaries of a declaration, and to take such measures, as might be deemed necessary for successfully prosecuting a war, and accomplishing the ends of justice. And it cannot be denied but the ferreting out of such nonsters in human shape, wherever they may take shelter, whether in the huts and caves on the sea shore, or in the towns and villages of Cuba, or elsewhere, is justifiable in every respect, since it is for the benefit of the civilized world, and is demanded by every princi ple of justice and humanity. Nor can their extermination afford cause of complaint, for any persons affording protection to, or aiding, bed, and begins rolling and turning and fret. abetting or relieving in any way whatever, individuals of this description, or obstructing the course of justice-become partners to their crime, and are themselves enemies of the human race, and justly deserving of equal abhorrence and punishment. Now if the inhabitants of Foxardo, a town known to have been the recentacle of pirates and their booty, have in any way opposed the exertions of Commodore Porter, in his fatiguing and dangerous excursions against the pirates-if, instead of joining hand in hand with our citizens, and offering every facility in their power in the prosecution of the search, they have wantonly and unnecessarily opposed, detained, and insulted themon what principles are they attempted to be justified, or rather in what light must the world not view them; and in what relation do they not stand with pirates and buccaniers themselves? or what degree of blame is attached to Commodore Porter, if, in the pro tecting the lives and property of his fellow citizens, he has ventured to throw down the barriers which an unprincipled set of "receivers of stolen goods" would have placed between him and the object of his pursuit?

SUMMERFIELD, breathed his last at New-York, about eleven o'clock on Monday morning last, after a painful illness of near four weeks -Every one who knew him, loved him, and wifl mourn. The Christian Church will mourn. And with the primerous denominations to which he was attached, and in which he shone like a meteor of heavenly light, his loss will be irreparable. He was indeed a meteor; he shot upon us in 9 twinkling; and shone as it were but for a moment, and sunk to rise upon the world no more. He was a native of the neighborhood of Manchester, Lugiand in the 26th year of his age, and the eighth of his ministry. Of his personal appearince we need not speak. Who that has seen him. out retains a distinct impression of his graceful form, his comely features, and the sweet benignity of his countenance, beaming as it were celestial light! Of his character we need not speak -Who that has known him, ever knew a being partaking of the frail nature of humanity, more spotless and lovely! Of his eloquence we need not speak. Who that has listened to the silver tones of his voice, the fervent strains of his manner and his soul-moving eloquence-but has felt his Commodore Porter has published a pamphlet bosom thrill within him, as he wiped the gushing tear from his cheek. B. he is no more. That form of beautiful symmetry is laid low:-that countenance which but a few weeks since beamed with intelligence and grace, is now cold and palid hat tongue whose every movement was melo-, is mute. But after all, we should not grieve

"Tis great to pause and think In what a brighter world than this his spirit shines, And now he's wash'd his mortal cares and sins away, And now he drinks the consolations of a Saviour's love, And now he tunes his voice to angel themes, . And now he joins a band, the rapture of whose song

An Angel's mind can scarce imagine."

He was suffered much boddy pain and anguish luring his illness, but while his reason was not lriven from her empire, he bore it with the neckness and patience of a lamb. Not a sigh nor marmer escaped his lips, but all was calm, erene, and bright, when he closed his eyes in eath, as the last rays of the setting sun glancing from the west upon the mellow light of autumnal

Scrafola has been considered as incurable by the medical profession. In its local developments it frequently follows injuries of the joints, and gives rise to a species of white swelling. Deafness frequently arises from a scrafulous state of the ear.

Consumption depends more frequently than is supposed on a low kind of inflammation, hence it is that the usual mode of treatment is not only inefficacious, but destructive.

the inindicious use of mercury has so modified the apagree on its symptoms and mode of cure. These modifi-cations are so closely connected with a strumous state of the system, that the Panneca offers as the most suitable remedy. The cures effected in the above named diseases, by this medicine prove more than millions of the ories.

The Panacea is not unpleasant to the taste; requires no attention in the usual habits of life except an abstinence from spirituous liquors—it a ts on the liver, that mammoth giand of the system, alters its vitiated secre-tions; calms the critability of the stomach, and strengthens the appetite; purifies the blood, induces a hearthy action of the skin, and produces that happy equilibrium which constitutes health.

SINBADISM.

In the Island of Gylon, which is one of the Molucca Islands, there is a nation with ears so large, that they hang down on their shoulders; and in another island close by it, there is a nation with ears still longer. The inhabitants of it are accustomed, when they go to sleep, to lay down on one ear and cover themselves up with the other!!!

Mr. Rothschild, the celebrated banker, so much beloved for his wealth, was about to be presented at an approaching Levee to King George the IV. Prince Esterhazy, the Austrian Ambassador, was to introduce Mr. R. Thus we see the omnipotence of money .- An Austrian noble, who would spurn a serf, or a beggar from his door, because birth did not entitle him to consideration, solicits the honor of introducing to a splendid court, a man whose origin it is said, was of the lowest obscurity, who, at one period of his existence, cried, 'old clothes' in London, and whose manners and habits are not considered of the most polished order. We of course give credit to Mr. Rothschild for his successful career, but it is really very inconsistent on the part of Kings and Nobles, to receive into their society, an individual, who cannot boast of ancestral dignity. In all probability, the banker has more good sense than all the royal heads that congregate at the Levee; but still nothing, save wealth, has attained for him this distinction-a distinction, no doubt, of which he thinks very little.

Napoleon and the Ants .- The ants had appeared in great numbers in his bedroom, since he occupied it less, and had climbed upon his ble, on which there was usually some sugar. Allured by the bait, they had immediately established a chain of communication, and taken possession of the sugar basin. Napoleon was anxious that they should not be disturbed in their plan; he only now and then moved the sugar, following only their n neeuvres, and admiring the activity and industry they displayed, until they found it again .-"This is not instinct," said he : "it is much more-it is sagacity, intelligence, the idea of civil association. But these little beings have not our passions, our cupidity; they assist, but do not destroy each other. I have vainly endeavoured to defeat their purpose; have removed the sugar to every part of the room; they have been one or two, sometimes three days looking for it, but have always succeeded at last. The idea strikes me to surround the table with water, and see whether that will stop them. Doctor, send for some." But water chid not stop them, the sugar was still pillaged. The emperor then substituted vinegar, and the ants no longer ventured to approach .-- I "You see it is not instinct alone that guides them, they are prompted by something else, but what I know not. However, be the principle which directs them what it may, they afford to man an example, worthy of observation and reflection. It is only by perseverance and tenaciousness, that any object can be at tained .- Last days of Napoleon.

Raising Cucumbers .- I have tried this pro cess of raising cueumbers many years with success. I place an old hogshead or barrel on the south side of a building, in the warmest place I have; fill it as high as the bung-hole. with rocks or refuse brick; put on a handful of straw, and six or seven inches of dirt on that, leaving about two inches unfilled; put my seed on that, throw brush from the cask around; put an horn in the bung-hole; occasionally pour in a pail of water. The straw will conduct it to the roots of the cucumbers. They will need no other watering, be three weeks earlier, and bear as many as you can raise from twenty hills, planted on the sur-

DYSPEPSIA.

DYSPERSIA.

Disfallible test of truth, experience, the most effectual medicine ever offered in any country, for the cure of all those deranged states of the digestive organs, denominated Dyspepsia or Indigestion, which frequently makes its appearance in the most complicated forms, such as loss of appetite, sickness at the stomach, and sometimes testing; becking up of water, which is sometimes tasteless, but most commonly sour; gnawing pain in the stomach, 'a art-burn,' costiveness, paleness of the countenance, languor, lowness of the spirits, palpitation of the heart, vertigo, and disturbed sleep. The number of these symptoms varies in different patients, by some being felt only in parts, while others have additional ones, equally disagreeable, such as severe pains in the head and breast, flatulence, emaciation, or wasting of the whole body, with great weakness, particularly of the legs. These pills will most effectually remove all soutness of the stomach, not merely by neutralizing the acid, but by correcting that morbid state of the secretions which give rise to it; and at the same time will restore to the debilitated organs of digestion, that tone and vigour which is absolutely necessary to the well-being of the animal economy. The best proof of their efficacy is, that they are prescribed by many of the first physicians, and used by the most intelligent families throughout the union.

SWAIM'S PAMACEA. THIS valuable Medicine has obtained a distinction which its efficacy alone can support. As a purifier of the blood it has no parallel. It is the most useful spring and autumn alterative ever known. All those who are affected with scrofula, Leproxy, Scurvy, or cutaneous Eruptions, or any of those melancholy diseases arising from impurity of the blood and juices—also, those who suffer by diseased Liver, Rheumatte affections, or from indiscretion of their youth, or those whose constitutions are broken down by mercurial, antimonial, or arsenical medicines, should submit to a course of Swaim's Panacea. The effect of this Medicine is such as not to interrupt either basiness or pleasure, and or Swaim's Panacea. The effect of this Medicine is such as not to interrupt either business or pleasure, and requires only the common restraints of moderation in diet. It is conveyed by the circulating fluids, and corrects their tendencies to all those diseases which originate in vitiated blood. It is a safe, though a powerful substitute for mercury, and removes those evils which an unsuccessfuluse of that mineral so often occasions,

In all complicated cases of Scrofula and Syphilis, and where the Syphilitic Virus of the parent causes a development of Scrofula in the child, this is the only revelopment of Scrotula in the child, this is the only re-medy upon which a single hope of recovery can be rea-sonably founded; there has been no instance of its fai-ture, when properly used. It imparts vigour to the whole system while the cure is going on—an operation salong looked for in vain by the imedical world; at the same time the patient is enabled to take nourishing food, which under the common modes of practice, is usually which under the common modes of practice, is usually withheld from the sufferer. In many instances where the horrible ravages of ulceration had laid bare ligament and hone, and where, to all appearance, no human neans but amputation could have saved life; in cases extreme as even here described, have patients been snatched from the grave and restored to good health, and the devouring disease completely eradicated. The discovery of a remady like this now offered for sale has been a discovery of the country from the property of the sale has been a discovery of the sale has been a discovery een a desideratum from time immemorial.

The Proprietor does not suppose his bare assertion will convince: he will therefore give references to such as have been cured, and those under his care, among whom are many highly respectable citizens, that shall satisfy the most incredulous of its superior efficacy in the disorders for which it is here recommended. Every member of society should aid in diffusing information of this discovery—humanity alone makes it a duty, CERTIFICATES.

"I have, within the last two years had an opportunity of seeing several cases of very inveterate ulcers, which, having resused previously the regular modes of treatment, were healed by the use of Mr. Swaim's Panacca; and I do believe, from what I have seen that it will prove an important remedy in scrofulous, venereal and mercurial diseases.

"I have applied the Panacea of Mr. Swaim in numerous instances, within the last three years, and have always found it extremely efficacious, especially in secondary syphilis and in mercurial disease. I have no hesitation in pronouncing it a medicine of inestimable value.

'I have repeatedly used Swaim's Panacea, both in the Hospital and in private practice, and have found it to be a valuable medicine in chronic, syphilitic, and scrotulous complaints and in obstinate cutaneous affec-tions. CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.

The great demand and wonderful success of this medicine, has induced a number of persons to imitate it in various ways. Some are selling Sarsaparilla and other syrups, imposing them on the ignorant for the Panacea; others are mixing the genuine medicine with molasses, &c. making three bottles out of one—thus retaining some of its virtues. These imutations and adulterationshave, in many instances, protracted the sufferings of patients, in cases where the grunine medicine would have proved instantly effectious.—I therefore deem it a duty I owe the public, to acquain them, that it is a duty I owe the public, to acquaint them, that it is impossible, from the very nature of its constituents, to be discovered by chemical analysis; and, consequently, that all other mixtures represented to be mine, and sold as such, are fraedulent and base impositions, calculated to deceive the informat and inwary. The genuine medicine has my signature on a label, representing Hercules and the Hydra, and my name on the seal. Price $2 per bottle, or $30 per dozen.

Communications, post paid, and orders from any part of the world, will receive immediate attention. "Printed Directions accompany the Medicine. William Swaim, No. 13 South Ninth street, Philadelphia, opposite the

A CURIOSITY.

A MR. GIBBS, Lottery Broker, of this city, has bee recently exhibiting in this state a curious piece of mechanism, said to be the work of an Italian artist. I consists of a box 8 1-2 inches long, 2 1-2 wide, and 1 1-deep—of fine gold. On one end is a soulf box—on the deep—of fine gold. On one end is a snull box—on the other, a lid opens and discloses an eight day time piece which, besides striking the hours and quarters, plays; number of beautiful tunes. But the most wonderful par is, that on setting a spring, a picture on the top of the box rises slowly, and discovers a bird ascending from below. The bird is about an inch in length; of plam age the most rich, and yet the most natural. It sing with astonishing sweetness, and accompanies its voice which the property of with all those motions common to a living bird—its heaturns from side to side—its little bill opens and its thro swells at every note, and its wings and tal spread an contract during its song. After finishing and repeating its strain, it drops upon its golden nest, descends to it retreat, and the lid gently closes to its place.
